$350.00 FOR RED CROSS

AUCTION SALE A GREAT SUCCESS

The Whist Drive and Auction Sale, held last Friday, in aid of the Red Cross was a complete success in every way.

The Whist Drive resulted in Mrs. T. L. Hart and Clarence Purdy taking the first prizes, while Mrs. E. B. Purdy and L. E. Larder succeeded in securing the consolation prizes. Fourteen tables were used for cards while a considerable number of those present enjoyed themselves otherwise. Throughout the whole evening some very excellent music was rendered by the Monitor band.

J. C. Lay proved a very witty and efficient auctioneer and caused some amusement by his remarks, pointed and otherwise. Good prices prevailed, the bidding being very brisk.

In all, the sum of $347.55 was raised and the committee was more than pleased with the hearty response to the appeal for funds in aid of this worthy cause. They wish to take this opportunity of extending their thanks to J. C. Lay for his services as auctioneer, to the members of the band for their help in fixing the hall and supplying the music, and to all who made donations of goods or money.

Note and Comment

In the east they are raising a boycott on eggs and refuse to buy them until the price is reasonable. In a great many places the people have quit using them without the necessity of a boycott.

The Consumers' League of New York city have sent out a call as follows:

Buy before the rush comes.
Buy before the crush comes.
Buy before the slush comes—
Buy your presents now!

Whether they're for surly
Husbands or for curly
Little tots or grandpas—
Oh, buy your presents now!

While as verse it may not be according to Hoyle, still it has a message that all should heed at this time of the year.

Fortunately for the average man his brains are not on exhibition.

When you're tired, quit.

That doesn't mean, necessarily quit work; it means quit spending so much time in other ways that you don't get enough sleep to furnish you with the proper working energy. You can, of course, keep going on black coffee and your nerves. But whenever you are spending more energy than you are getting, you're issuing cheques against the bank's balance of future health. And as these cheques are cashed, the balance dwindles. One "night" tonight must be repaid later in life—
with compound interest.

Most people have taking ways—but very few have bringing back ways.

Little Willie felt indisposed, and the family doctor ordered him to take a powder.
"Come on, dear," coaxed his mother, "take the powder, it will make you quite well at once."

"Don't want to" wailed the little fellow. "Don't want no medicine."

"On, Willie," mother said,
"you never heard me complain about a little powder, have you?"
"No, an' neither would I," was the startling reply; "if I could just put it on my face as you do. But I have to swallow it."

The crown prince probably realizes that one advantage of being the kaiser's son is that you don't have to prove yourself really a good soldier to win a lot of medals.

The prophet is a merry elf:
He heartily enjoys himself.
He brags if what he says comes true;
If not, he prophesies anew.

Statistics show

That for the first six months of 1916 there was a big increase in fire losses in Canada.

Your home or place of business may be included in the losses of the next six months.

Better have them insured at once and not run the risk of being left penniless, in case of a fire.

LADY URSULA'S HUSBAND

BY
FLORENCE WARDEN

Ward, Lock & Co., Limited
TORONTO

It was by chance that the letter Lady Ursula received from Lady Creslow formally inviting her to pay the visit she had suggested, reached Oare Court on the morning after Paul's departure.

She read the letter through with a painful countenance. Lady Creslow said in the most decided way that the visit was to be paid by Lady Ursula alone, and although she worded her letter tactfully, there could be no doubt that she declined to receive her son. Lady Ursula wondered, however, whether there were hidden under these words something of a natural longing to hear about her disinherited son, even though she was too proud to own to such a weakness.

However that might be, the letter had to be answered, and Lady Ursula sat down to do so at once. In her letter she thanked Lady Creslow for her invitation, admitted sorrowfully that all was not well between her and her husband, but gave no details, and ended by saying that, however she might feel towards her husband, it would be too painful for her to visit Lady Creslow without him. With this tactful avoidance of a more explicit avowal of her parting from Paul, Lady Ursula dispatched the letter.

There was only just time to do so before the car was ready to take the Wintersand party to the station. A letter had been sent to Lady Gravenhurst on the previous evening by Lord Eastling, warning her that they were all coming home rather suddenly, and that they had had news to tell her connected with Paul Payne. That was as much as he thought it prudent to write, and he left it to his mother to prepare the Earl.

The journey was a painful one, and tedious besides, as they had to break their journey in London, and the weather was bitterly cold, with snow showers and a biting wind.

An old-fashioned carriage, roomy but not particularly comfortable, was waiting for them at the station, and they reached Wintersand as the short winter's day was drawing to a close.

When the three young people entered the room where Lady Gravenhurst was sitting alone knitting by the fire the meeting was a most distressing one. For Lady Ursula, unable to answer the first questions put to her by the countess about the absence of her husband, burst into tears.

While Emmeline led her upstairs, Lady Eastling hastened to take advantage of the earl's absence to inform his mother of what had occurred.

"I'm afraid, mother," he said, "that you must be prepared for a great shock."

"I am prepared," said she calmly. "Of course a marriage between one of our daughters and an American adventurer could only end in one way."

"Only he's not an American. He's the son of Sir Morton Creslow."

The countess laid down her knitting with a little cry. Those words told her more than he imagined, for she was old enough to remember the scandal caused by the delinquencies of Alban Creslow in his very early youth, and the information as to Paul's identity supplied the key to the puzzle.

"And he's left her?" gasped the countess.

"She sent him away. She had to. She found out that he had been making her a present of jewels which had been stolen."

Lady Gravenhurst was deeply moved and shocked.

"He is living the same sort of life as ever, then?" she asked in a voice of deep distress.

Lord Eastling hesitated.

"I don't know whether I can say that. I'm inclined to think that he is."

as heartily tired of the life he's been leading as he is ashamed of it. But what I've told you is enough to show how Ursula felt when she found it out, especially as he had been lying to her about it. I'm afraid, mother, he's a bit of a bad lot."

"The countess was deeply distressed, but what troubled her the most was the break between Paul and Ursula. She was inclined to be merciful to Paul, whom she had liked personally, and to believe that a good wife might have done much for him."

"It is not the way to reform a man," she said, "to drive him out of the house when you find he's not a saint."

"It was flagrant, mother," pleaded he. "Remember, those very jewels which he presented to Ursula went out to be stolen."

"And what has become of them?" she asked quickly.

"They have been sent to the police."

"Restored, that is to say."

"Yes, Ursula did that yesterday."

"Agreed to his will?"

"No, I can't say that."

"Well, that alters the case, does it not?"

If Paul allowed them to be restored to him, and if you believe that he wishes to lead an honest life for the future, Ursula should not have been hard. Where has he gone to?"

"I don't know."

Lady Gravenhurst looked annoyed. "More scandal and gossip," she murmured.

"No, you can't even answer the questions which will be asked by everyone about his disappearance, then?"

"No, I suppose we can't."

The countess seemed to think this was as bad as anything she had heard about the affair. Decorum was one of the earl's chief virtues, and his establishment, and this was a breach of it which she could not forgive.

"What will my father say?" asked Lord Eastling.

"He will say," said the countess with decision, "that the girls ought never to have been allowed to visit at Oare Court, indeed, I'm afraid he will find a certain satisfaction in showing us that it was the sort of thing we ought to have been prepared for when we let them stay with such extraordinary people as these."

Lord Eastling uttered an exclamation. "That would be most unjust," he said. "What does Emmeline say to that?"

The question aroused fresh alarm in the countess.

"Emmeline!" echoed she. "Why should she be interested?" She faced her son solemnly. "Do you mean to tell me," she said, "that Emmeline also is going to contract a marriage of the same kind?"

"Oh, no, no! I'm sure I have not. I don't know of any such thing," said he hastily. "But, well, you know, mother, you wouldn't have let them go there if you hadn't understood that—"

That—well, that they are girls, and that there are men about Oare Court, men who are looking out for wives."

"They must find them elsewhere than in our family, my son," said Lady Gravenhurst. "I don't like these fortuitous alliances. Hush! here comes your father!"

The earl came into the room at the moment, and greeted his son with an inquiry as to the reason of their sudden return.

"I thought you were all going to stay at this place with the old name, among those funny people, until—"

—the election," said he.

Lord Eastling made the best answer he could, saying that his sisters wanted to come back to Wintersand, and then he made his escape, leaving the task of breaking the bad news to his mother.

But Lady Gravenhurst found the way had been made smooth for her in a manner she did not expect. The earl had met his younger daughter, and had been prepared by her for the fact that there had been "friction," as she described it, at Oare Court on account of the pearls which had been taken away and then restored to Mrs. Fincham.

Of course the earl and countess had heard this story, and had treated the affair as "the sort of thing that happens at houses of that kind."

—however, the affair had assumed a more sinister aspect, and Lady Gravenhurst informed her husband that Paul Payne was implicated in the business.

"Just what I should have expected," said the earl indignantly. "I hope this will be a warning to you, my dear, not to allow the young people to visit at second-rate houses for the future."

"I'm afraid," said Lady Gravenhurst gently, "that the harm is done. Did Emmeline tell you that Ursula and her husband had separated?"

The earl drew himself up. "That I cannot permit," he said with decision. "They must make it up again. I cannot have rosin about the marriage at this early stage. What is it? Incompatibility of temper, I suppose? As if everybody's temper was not incompatible with everybody else's, unless people have the sense to agree to disagree."

"It is more important than that."

"What is the matter then?"

"Well, what has wound-out to be living under an assumed name?"

"Good gracious!"

"He is really a son of Sir Morton Creslow. You remember the scandal of a dozen years ago?"

The earl was partly exasperated, and partly calmed, for he considered that a scapegrace who is the son of an English baronet of ancient name is at least the equal of a man of reputable life who comes from nowhere and is related to nobody one has ever heard of."

"Has he ever been convicted?" he asked in a low voice.

"Never. I am led to believe that he was always too clever for that."

The earl sighed.

"It's a most unhappy business," he said. "But still I am of opinion that, all things considered, they would do better to hush it up. Ursula can surely bring her good influence, the influence of her own family and our own life, to bear on her husband."

"I don't know. They have been too precipitate altogether. He has gone away, and I understand that nobody knows where he is."

The earl was very much put out. "I consider that Ursula is very greatly to blame," said he stiffly.

"What is the use of the managers service if a woman thinks herself at liberty to dismiss her husband at the first disagreement?"

"It is an exceptional case, dear, put in the countess, gently."

"Ursula considers herself an exceptional woman," retorted the earl. "Well, what can we do? The harm is done. Paul has gone away; in fact, he has disappeared."

The earl walked up and down the room several times, and then stood within a few feet of the countess, looking at the fire.

"What will be the end of this unhappy business?"

Lady Gravenhurst shook her head. "I am afraid," she said with a suppressed sob, "that Ursula will break her heart."

(To Be Continued.)

Enormous Quantities of Rubbers to Be Used

Output of Rubbers and Overshoes Will Be Especially Large This Season

It will no doubt be a matter of interest to many to learn that the estimated quantity of crude rubber to be used this year by the manufacturers of the different rubber products will amount to 202,000 tons. In the face of the fact that the United States will use approximately half of the output, while Great Britain is in practical control of the entire world's supply, a peculiar situation is presented. The explanation given in respect to the control of the supply is that the present producing plantations were established by Great Britain some years ago. Through the financing and under the direction of the British Government, rubber plantations are now operated in Ceylon, Sumatra, the Malay States and Java.

As a result of this control, the British Government has been able to gradually lower the price of crude rubber from the former price of $3 a pound, which obtained in 1910, to 67 cents a pound at the present time. Just previous to the outbreak of the war the price paid for crude rubber was $1.25 per pound, so it will be noticed that despite war conditions, when the prices of all commodities have been soaring upwards, the price of crude rubber has been reduced.

It naturally follows that rubber is now rapidly superseding leather in every instance possible. The cost of leather is soaring constantly, and leather footwear is reaching prohibitive prices. Rubber footwear will, according to indications, be extensively worn this winter. It will no doubt prove a real economy to protect expensive leather shoes with rubbers and with rubber overshoes. Nothing is more ruinous to leather than water, and the wearing of particularly injurious effect on fine shoes.

Rubber Supply Steady While Leather Gets Scarcer

This Explains Low Price of Rubber Footwear in Spite of Increase in Cost of Chemicals, Fabrics and Labor.

The war is using up enormous quantities, both of leather and rubber. At the same time it is seriously restricting the output of the former, much of which came from Russia—while rubber production keeps pace with the demand. From the great plantations now reaching maturity in Britain's tropical Dominions will come this year 150,000 tons of raw rubber—75% of the world's production, and an increase of over 40,000 tons over last year.

Thus, thanks to the British Government's foresight in encouraging these plantations, the Allies' armies have been abundantly supplied with all the rubber products they need—Germany and her allies have been cut off—and the price to the world at large has actually been reduced. Meanwhile leather has been getting scarcer and more expensive—80% higher than in 1914—and the end is not yet.

At normal prices a pair of good shoes cost about four times as much as a pair of rubbers—and would last twice as long if rubbers or overshoes were worn to protect them. Or a pair of heavy rubbers for the farm cost much less than heavy shoes, and would stand much more wear in bad weather. So even before the war rubbers were a mighty good investment, to say nothing of their prevention of wet feet, colds and doctors' bills.

Now, when leather costs so much more in proportion, the saving from wearing rubber footwear is so outstanding that no one who hesitates to shiver will think of rubbers, rubber boots, or whatever kind of rubber footwear he who is anxious to help win the war, for by wearing rubber he conserves the leather that is so scarce, yet so absolutely necessary to the soldiers.

Wear Rubbers and Save Leather for our Fighting Men!

Inconsistent

A man who took his infant daughter to be baptized told the clergyman to call her Venus.

"But I refuse to call her Venus," said the clergyman indignantly. "Venus is the name of a pagan goddess."

Advantage of Lady Churchwardens

Lady churchwardens may come to the fore as a result of the shortage of men.

One such official in a primitive parish insisted on her right to collect alms. "I get more money than anybody else," said she, in reply to a remonstrance, "for if folks won't put in when I hand the bag I stand there till they do."—London Daily News.

Note and Comment

An exchange prints the following list of words ending in "ough," and adds the pronunciation of the more obscure words, so far as ascertainable from the dictionaries: Messrs. Gough (goff), Hough (hoff) and Clough (cluff) though tough enough, thought through the day that they would visit Mr. Brough (brool), who, having a hiccough (hiecup) and a cough, lived in a clough with plenty of dough, and a tame chough (chuff), kept near a plough in a rough trough, hung to a bough, over a lough (loch). A slough (sluf) of the bank into the slough (sloo) injured his horse's hough (hoc).

"To keep warm in winter," says a newspaper doctor, "eat plenty of nourishing food."

What a pity that the poor can't all know this, and thus avoid their annual fuel problem!

Will it come to pass that the travellers will pack their samples around in the old-fashioned carpet bag that our grandfathers used to sport?

It will, unless every drummer suddenly becomes a millionaire.

The time is soon coming when the possession of any article made of real leather will be a sign that the owner has a bunch of kale. The latest goods to go skyward in price are grips, suitcases, handbags and trunks.

Practically everything in leather will advance about 100%. Some of these days the man with a leather grip will be taken for a second Carnegie.

"Yes, Henry and I certainly possess similar tastes!" exclaimed the adoring wife.

"We are surely interested in the same things!"

"Yes," agreed Henry's mother-in-law, grimly, "you certainly are! You care more for dear Henry than anyone else in the world, and so does he!"

Sometimes a preacher is sorely perplexed about the handling of complaints against church members. This is how one did the trick. He had learned that a person will say a great deal which he is not prepared to substantiate, and whenever a member came with a complaint he took a blank book and his pen and said: "Now I will write down what you say, and you can sign it, and then I shall know just what the complaint is." And he carried the book for forty years, and opened it perhaps a thousand times, but he never wrote a word in it.

When people have to sign their complaints they usually prefer not to make them.

Best Wishes for A Merry Christmas Season.

Revolutionizing Shell Making

Manitoba Man Invents Machine to Facilitate Output

Through an official visit of the Lieut.-Governor of Manitoba, the Premier of the province, the mayor of the city and others to a factory in St. Boniface, Man., it has leaked out that a local mechanical genius has invented two machines which promise to revolutionize shell-making methods. They can produce 10 shells in the time that it takes to make one by the usual process. They are capable of turning out a shell from a solid piece of steel finished ready for the load in three minutes.

Experts have examined them and pronounced them to be valuable additions to modern mechanical appliances. If all munition factories, they say, were equipped with such machines, there would be no difficulty in meeting the enormous needs of the allied armies.

Mechanical engineers from New York and Chicago, sent to inspect and report, said that, besides being the biggest war-time inventions they knew of, they were the most valuable things in the ordinary world of mechanics and commerce, being quite easily adaptable to many other purposes, such as automobile bearings, cylinders, etc.

AN IMPORTANT LETTER FROM NIAGARA FALLS.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—"I was miserable, tired out and dragging around. My legs could scarcely support me. My husband had read about 'Favorite Prescription' and he got me to use it. I used four bottles and the results were surprising. I got stronger, was less nervous, my appetite improved and I felt like a new person. It is the best medicine for women I have ever heard of."

—Mrs. A. C. Brown, 39 Clifton Ave., Niagara Falls, Ont.

There is nothing that will bring comfort and renew hope to the invalid so surely as good news. When the vital forces are at a low ebb and everything seems useless, a ray of joy and assurance will stimulate the weary body to new effort and energy. A letter from a loved one has turned the tide in many a siege of sickness.

Doctor Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., has good news for every suffering woman. Write him to-day and tell him your troubles, and he will send you just the right advice to restore you to health and bring back the roses to your cheeks, and without charge. His "Favorite Prescription" has been the rescue of thousands of suffering women. Many grateful patients have taken Dr. Pierce's advice.

Russia's Lost Mica Deposits

Long before window glass was made, Russia supplied the world with mica. In 1861 she exported 42,600 kilograms to Holland, 40,000 kilograms to England, and 8,600 kilograms to America. (A kilogram equals about two and a fifth pounds). As the glass industry grew, that of mica waned, and so completely that the deposits of mica were forgotten. Before the present war Russia was actually importing mica from Canada and India. Today some of the mica beds have been rediscovered in the Mamay forest, which is now producing 6,000 kilograms annually. Other deposits are being worked in the Ural Mountains, near Archangel, and in Siberia. The price has risen from about $1.50 a pound to about $35 a pound.

Unions Show High Cost of Living

The railway unions of this town have solved the high cost of living. Some time ago a special committee was appointed to purchase food and fuel supplies as required by the members. The committee has handled within the past week two carloads of potatoes, two cars of wood, forty head of cattle, two tons of honey, eight carloads of coal, and fifty carloads of hardwood. In a few days it expects a carload of groceries and two of apples. The committee is composed of twenty-five members, representing different crafts, and has saved 30 per cent. on its purchases to date.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease that is able to be cured in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts through the blood or the mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the formation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the system, and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietary have so much to say in the curative powers of Hall's Catarrh Cure that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any catarrh that fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: J. C. Our Forest Products

The state of Canada's trade in timber since the war is a matter of the greatest importance to our citizens. The figures for the calendar years 1914 and 1915 are given in the bulletins of the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior. The subject is divided in this way: lumber is dealt with in Bulletin 58A, pulp and plywood in 58B, and poles and cross-ties in 58C. Any citizen interested who has not received a copy of any of these bulletins may secure one free by writing to the Director of Forestry, Ottawa.

Popular Authors

"That stringy looking lady going by over there is our well-known author," the triumphant man said. The landlord of the Petunia tavern. "Her contributions are printed in the big newspapers all over the country. She is an old maid. Her name is Miss Cissaphine Clatter." "Strange, but I did not remember having heard anything about her," said the stranger. "What does she write—poetry?" "Nope! testimonials. She has been cured of most all the ills that humans flesh is ill to, as the fellow said." —Judge.

One Grave Lesson of the War

One of the grave lessons of this war—as of every war—is that the consequences of carelessness, indolence and ignorance are not to be made good by any bravery or zeal of the fighting man. And for that reason it would be treason to the Empire to permit the careless, indolent and ignorant to escape scotfree when their faults cause disaster. — London Daily Mail.

THE ONLY WAY TO CURE RHEUMATISM

Must Be Treated Through the Blood and the Poisonous Acid Driven Out

The twinges and tortures of rheumatism are not due to cold, damp weather as so many people suppose. Rheumatism comes from poisonous acid in the blood. This is a medical truth that every rheumatic sufferer should realize. There is only one way to cure rheumatism—it must be treated through the blood. All the treatments and rubbing and so-called electrical treatment in the world will not cure rheumatism, and the sufferer who tries them is not only wasting money, but is allowing the trouble to become more firmly rooted in the system and harder to cure when the proper remedy is tried. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have had remarkable success in curing rheumatism because they go right to the root of the trouble in the blood, driving out the poisonous acid, releasing the stiffened joints, clearing away the torturing pains, and giving the victim renewed health and ease. Mr. Vincent Brown, Havre Bouche, N.S., says: "For two years I was an almost constant sufferer from rheumatism, the trouble being so bad at times that I could scarcely get about. The trouble seemed to bring with it anæmia, and altogether I was in a very bad condition. I used doctor's medicine for almost a year without relief. Then on the advice of a friend I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I think I took altogether about a dozen boxes, but with the result that I am again enjoying perfect health." You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail, just paid, at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Origin of an Old Saw

"A feather in your cap" arose from a custom of woodcraft enthusiasts, and in Scotland today the one who kills the first woodcock plucks out a feather and proudly wears it in his cap. Oliver Cromwell gave it dignity of thought and diction when he declared England's offered crown. "Royalty is but a feather in a man's cap," he said. "Let children enjoy their rattle."

Magnitude of Arcturus

The star Arcturus, which is known to be a sun for a faraway system of planets, is 11,500,000 times farther removed from us than is our solar primary. His diameter is 224,000,000 miles. Our sun is but 866,000 miles in diameter, a fact which proves that Arcturus is at least 551,000 times greater in bulk than is our sun.

TO THE BOYS

Here's a Merry Christmas to you, boys
And a greeting full of cheer.
And as far as heaven may grant it, boys
A happy and Glad New Year!

You're giving your best for us, boys.
And it's little for us to do
Who are staying in peace at home, boys
To do this much for you.

Each gift is a thought for you, boys.
And is wrought with care untold,
And each gift is fill'd with love, boys.
By loving hands enroll'd.

And we send them with greetings, boys
Far deeper than words can tell.
From hearts you cherish so much, boys
In the land you love so well.

For it may be worth your while, boys
Far away o'er the rolling foam,
To know that you're not forgot'n, boys
By the folks you've left at home.

Statistics show

That for the first six months of 1916 there was a big increase in fire losses in Canada.

Your home or place of business may be included in the losses of the next six months.

Better have them insured at once and not run the risk of being left penniless, in case of a fire.
